

ABSTRACT

A wireless communications system providing interactive voice response is disclosed. The system is menu-driven, and can accept information and requests from customers. In response to one type of request, the system can provide the customer with information regarding their current rate plan and features. The system also includes provisions that provide customers with details of the rate plan, including free number of minutes, and rate information for calls placed at various times and various days.